SMAKE DANCE IS

Weird Ceremony is Performed Yearly by Hopi Indians.

HANDLE REPTILES UNHARMED

Says Coromony Originated During Great Drought Which Was Broken When the Children Went Out on the Piain and Gathered Snaker, and Pinyed and Danced With Them - Sometimes Dancers Are Bitten, but They Do Not Even

Many years ago a great drought visited the land of the Hopi Indians, in northern Arizona, according to an Indian legond. The corn and the metons died and there was no game. By and by the people themselves begun to die of hunger and thirst. The old men planted many prayer sticks. The gods were invoked in every way the people could devise. But no rain leame. There was great suitering. Then the children said: "We must help. How can we make the gods listen? By doing countries that ye ten? By doing something that we hate." So they went out on the pining below and gathered snakes, and played with them, putting them in their mouths, and singing and dancing them.

Then came great rains and the people's lives were saved. And the old men said: "The children have pleased the gods by playing with that which the gods love. We have learned our lessen." So they bound themselves in the treat such frequently. in the great snake fraternity, made songs and prayers, and once every year since then they have appealed to the gods for rain with their "snake brethers." Who are the messengers to the underworld, says Frederick J. Has-kin in the Chicago Dally News.

Dance Remains the Same. The cance is carried out now in much the same manner as it was years ago, it is believed. Two fraternities always participate, the Antolope and the Sanks, the former as assistants in certain rites. For nine days before the dance the men of the latter organization go out on the plains with notched sticks, buckskin bags and wallets of nacred meal to hunt for their sunke brothers.

nte in the afternoon of the day befare the dance, the Antelope priests appear in full regults of painted bodies, dance snahes and kills of brillant/solors, and with symbolic equipment such as bowls of sacred meal, prayer plumes, sacrificial plants, and festhered wands. For half an hour feathered wands. For half an hour they chant and enact a prayer for rain and for their brothers, the Snako priests.

The next morning before dawn run-ners have gone far out on the plain that they may race to the mesa top. hoping to reach it as the sun rises. They go loping along various paths, all of which converge in the trail to the top.

The court in which the dance occurs looks as usual except for the kisi built at one end. The kisi is the shrine of cottonwood boughs covered with canvas wherein the snakes are put for the ecremony. A shallow hole is due in front of it, over which a board is laid. This is Shi-pa-pu, the board 's inid. This is Shippepo, the board 's inid. This is Shippepo, the colling place of the gods.

to a m. or a little later the Antelope prests enter the court with the samet paraphernalis they employed the dt. before. After circling over Shippe, u a few times they take their places in either side of the kisl and sing in 'lly, rhythrically, and with a sing to My, rhythmically, and with a wild, vigorous melody.

Then the snake priests dash in—literally dash ko—their rattles jingling muchy, their feet padding the hard-packed earth faster than ear can conveniently count.
The Dance Grows Furious.

They take their places in front of the Antelope priests and with them chant and wave their wands for many minutes. The music seems to grow wilder. Suddenly it breaks. The smake priests separate, One of them kneels in front of the kiel, reaches in and pulls out a snake. He grips its neck with his lips so that its head project the little beyond his left jaw. and if t is a large snake, six or seven feet long, he grasps its hody with his hands. Meantime another priest, with Tehther wand, has taken his place at the durcer's right, places his left hand on the dancer's left shoulder, and with the wand strokes the body of the minke. Together, with high chythrole step, they start around the court. A third priest, also with a feather wand, falls in behind. Thus the whole fraternity forms into groups of three faster than words can describe, mak-raster than works can describe, making the circle of the dance.

Finally, almost unnoticed, women come from an liner room with plaques of sacrad ment and draw a huge white circle in one somer of the court. Then the lines break, The snakes are thrown in a heap inside the cirde, the women hastily and timidly sprinkle them with meat, and as hastily depart. Certain of the Younger Sanke priests dart in and, selzing as many reptiles as they can hold, dash in the four directions. Far out on the plain they release their loads—and their surport brothers seek their holes and boar the recently enacted min-prayer to the gods below.

The snakes' fangs are not pulled.
Sometimes the men are bitten, but it is claimed they do not even get shot.

Pasteurized milk! Tropical nuts! A delicious new home economy!

As a spread for bread, rolls or hot biscuits. Brednut has a perfectly delicious flavor. Unless your husband is an exception to the many we have talked with, he will not be able to detect the slightest "difference."

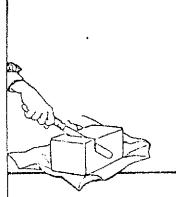

Notice, too, how your children enjoy Brednut. You would like to read bulletins of the U.S. Department of Agriculture which explain the energy value and digestibility of foods like Brednut. Such commendation is easy to understand when you know that Brednut is made from pasteurized milk and tropical nuts.

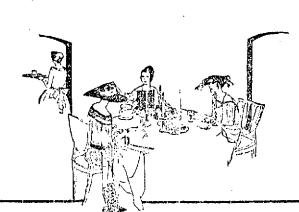

Pure white Brednut is sold by your grocer in pound pats. With each pound he will give you a wholesome vegetable material which quickly colors your Brednet to a rich golden vellow.

Co.ch Warner will send a team against Penn Saturday with consists of six regulars from last year's team, four substitutes and one man who was in the '21 freshman outfit. Capwas on the '21 freshman outfit. Captain 'Jolleran will be on the side lines with a broken arm, which is keeping him out all season. Five of the varily men are products of Pittsburg high schools, manely "Frenchy" Fredette, tackle, who prepared at Wilkinsburg High School and Kisht School. Captain John Chark and Jack Sack of Pittsburg High School, half-back John Anderson of Ben Avon High School, near Pittsburg, and full-back "Tiny" Hewitt of Wilkinsburg, a suburb of Pittsburg. Two other boys, end "Pie" Williams and quarterback "Nich." Shuler, are graduates of high "Mcd." Shuler, are graduates of high schools within a few miles of Pitts-burg. End Lloyd Jordan comes from Puns status ney High School. Charlie Puns status ney High School. Charlie Bowser, center, from Johnstown High School, and tackle "Dick" Stupson from Huntingdon High School. The only player whose home is outsile the Feystone State is halfback "Hoot" Flanagan, who is also the only man from the freshman 1921 team to make the warsity. The Panther's game last Saturday with Geneva was a walkaway, the score being 62-0, the largest a Pitt team has run up in a number of year. Geneva was good caough to hold W. & J. to a 14-0 score and to score on Carnegie Tech, being defeated 2-7 in that game. The Panthers looked mighty good in that game, although the opposition was not very stiff and after the first few touchdowrs it was a case of scoring almost The Panther's game last Saturday downs it was a case of scoring almos at will.

After the Pennsylvania game Pitt faces W. & J. at Porbes Field November 18, and Pennsylvania State Thanksgiving Day here. The team then has a letup for a month when it meet Leland Standford University at Pale Alto, California, December 30.
